Law School Labs

Student training focused on system, policy, and technology design and reform rather than on service to individual clients

Date: August 2024
Version history: This is Version 3.0

This document is a list of labs in law schools and law faculties around the world. "Labs" are sites for experiential learning and training that differ from law clinics in that students and faculty in labs work not simply on solving specific problems for specific clients but, more, design and innovate to generate system-level interventions in law and legal systems.

The motivation for compiling this list is the instinct that law lab directors are, as a group, among the most

Leaders and directors of these academic units are often the most creative, imaginative systems thinkers in legal education. As a pool of talent, they offer many of the best ideas for institution- and sector-wide renewal for legal education and training itself.
